

THE SCYTHES AND THE SYLPHIDS

Said the bee to the mower,
"Old Time moves slower,
And step thy reeking scythe,
Ah! little thou reest
The evil thou doest
To creatures as happy and blithe."

"Thou not the sweet clover
Thy blade surges over,
Could wing forth the merry bee's sigh,
Though each rose flower
Be a banquet-bower,
With nectared cups piled on high."

"But we, the while winging,
And thoughtfully humming,
All day o'er the meadow's green,
See kindred in kingdoms
Of manifold wingdoms
In myriads by man unseen."

"Dost thou smile?—lay thee prone
On the swath thou hast mown,
And peer through the standing grass,
And see with kind eyes
Of manifold wingdoms
In myriads by man unseen."

So the man took his nooning,
And fell to communing,
With insects, brown, bronzy and gilt,
When sped forth a spider,
His legs a mere fibre,
An apple-pie racing on stilts!

O'er the wight's head and shoulders,
Supporting them, boulders,
The magical urchin hied;
Till he gained the shoreward
And unwonted reward
In the clear level space he espied

"Oh! see his high vaulting!
Oh! note his proud hovering!
Then tell me good mower in truth,
Hath man in all story
Of knighthood and glory,
So wondrous and noble a youth?"

"Behold now ascending,
The tall grass scarce bending,
Till he mounts to its utmost spire,
Nocuous glowing,
With light flames o'erflowing,
To soar in his chariot of fire!"

"And if thus at noon-day,
Thou canst trace his bright way
Mid the meadow depths' gentle gloom,
What meteor at night
Can rival his light?
What star hath his beauty or bloom?"

With such warm laudation
Of each insect nation
As specimens chance to appear,
The bee waxed indignant
That man, all malignant,
Should still run his dire career:

"Man is but a sparse creature
In populous nature,
Compared with flies, emets and bees,
And small his domain
O'er mountain and plain
Within the grand empire of these."

"Yet man with a vanity
Kin to insanity,
Thinks all things were made for him!
Though countless creations
Of earth's generations
Behold not a tyrant so grim."

"Yet he's tardy and wingless,
Unarmored and stingsless,
Infested with numerous woes;
He has no antennae,
His legs are not many,
And not even hooks to his toes!"

"Bat with cruelty labeled
He slaughters his kindred,
And spares not a creature alive;
Weeks city and village
With rapine and pillage,
And swoops to the board of the hive."

Though the rustic's inspections
Wrought gentle reflections,
Less pungent than those of the bee,
They were fraught with good sense
And kindness prepense,
Such as a good mower's should be.
—From the Aldine for February.

Our Carcanet.

One cross the less remains for me to bear,
Already borne is that of yesterday;
That of to-day shall no to-morrow share,
To-morrow's, with itself, at all pass away,
The storm that yesterday ploughed up the sea,
Luried now beneath its level blue;
One storm the fewer now remain for me,
Ere sky and earth are made forever new.
—Bentley.

After Dinner.

A white boy met a colored boy and asked him what he had such a short nose for.
"I expect so it won't poke itself into other people's business." A good record.

Why is a beefsteak like a locomotive?
Because it is not of much account without its tender.

"Wasn't that a waste of powder?" said an Irishman to a Kentuckian who had just brought a coon to the ground with his rifle from a large tree.
"Why so, Pat?" asked the hunter.
"Sure the fall would 'a' killed him."

The child who cried for an hour didn't get it.
When the spider left the ark, did he walk or take a fly?

Advertising for a wife is just as absurd as it would be to get measured for an umbrella.

If you wish to travel cheaply, patronize those railroads which advertise to carry their passengers through without change.

A student who had been afflicted with a swollen nose and a half loaf, grumpily says that these professors study so much about eternity that they have no conception of time.

Housewifery.

APPLE DUMPLINGS BOILED.

I do not pretend to say that apple dumplings boiled, are better than steamed ones; but if properly made they are quite as good. As every kitchen does not contain a steamer of sufficient capacity to supply a dozen hungry stomachs, it is sometimes necessary to have them boiled, if we have them at all. I had lost faith entirely in boiled dumplings, believing them only solid and indigestible—as I had seen no other—until a neighbor kindly instructed me in the process. I made the crust of dough as for nice short biscuit, and nothing is better for them than the top of good rich buttermilk. Sift the flour in the bread bowl, making a hole in the center. Put into it one teaspoonful of pulverized saleratus, and mix with it a handful of dry flour; add one pint of rich buttermilk or sour cream and a pinch of salt. Stir briskly until it forms a stiff dough, then roll out on a soft dough. Knead but little, and roll out in round pieces as for pie crust, but rather thicker. Put the fruit on one half of the crust, and dredge over it a little flour, wetting the edges of the crust, as for pies, to make it stick. Lap the crust over the fruit, fastening the edges securely. It now resembles the old-fashioned "turnover," and should be pricked with a fork to expel the air and squeezed in the hands until it assumes a round form about the size of a large teacup. When they are all made in this way drop them into a kettle containing about a gallon of boiling water, previously salted a little, and on the bottom an old plate to prevent their burning. Keep them boiling briskly for three-fourths of an hour and covered closely, when they will be done, which may be determined by trying with a fork. Serve hot with cream and sugar flavored with lemon or nutmeg. Pie plant is very nice served in this way, as well as strawberries, raspberries and other fruits, and they always find a ready market at the dinner table.

HOPE EVERMORE

OUTRAGE FOR BOSE AND MUSCLE.
Liebig has shown that oatmeal is almost as nutritious as the very best English beef, and that it is richer than wheat bread in the elements that go to form bone and muscle. Professor Forbes of Edinburgh, during some twenty years, measured the breadth and height and also tested the strength of both the arms and loins of the students in the University—a very numerous class, and of various nationalities, drawn to Edinburgh by the fame of his teaching. He found that, in height, breadth of chest and shoulders, and strength of arms and loins, the English were at the bottom of the list, the Irish above them, the French; very much higher, the English; and highest of all, the Scotch and Scotch-Irish, from Ulster, who, like the natives of Scotland, are fed in their early years with at least one meal a day of good milk and good oatmeal porridge.

ONIONS

Are more economical and more nutritious than is generally supposed. If well dried, four pounds will contain one pound of gluten—an ingredient which gives flour all its value, for without it flour becomes starch, which, as a food, only warms; gives no strength to work.

COUNTRY HOME.

To PRESS FRUITS.—Press your ferns, as autumn leaves, when fresh gathered, with a warm (not hot) iron previously rubbed over with wax. Your ferns will be bright in about one minute, and will be bright and glossy, and will not fade when exposed to light and air, as they do when dried by the old method.

ABOUT ADVERTISING.

You can't eat enough in a week to last you a year, and you can't advertise on that plan either. People that advertise only once in three months forget that most folks cannot remember anything longer than about seven days.

No bell can ring so loudly as a good advertisement. People will believe what they see rather than what they hear. Quitting advertisements in dull times is like tearing out a dam because the water is low. Better plan will prevent good times from ever coming.

An Indian once tried the softness of feathers by laying one on a rock and stretching himself upon it. There are some who try the virtue of advertising on the same plan.

It's as true of advertising as of anything else in life, that if it is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well.

Bread is the staff of human life, and advertising is the staff of life in trade.

A simple "card," may profitably stand years without changing; but a sensation advertisement should be changed as often as you can get the printer to do it.

We don't recommend advertising as the best way to get a good wife; but we recommend it as the best way to get a good trade.

Small advertisements are worth more in proportion than large. If all people were deaf, loud advertisements might be expected to win.

A heavy advertisement once is more than quadrupled in value by a small card polished for a few months after, giving your address.

Beware of long, prosy advertisements. Judicious advertising always pays. Long type is not necessary in an advertisement. Blind folks don't read newspapers.

Never run down your opponent's goods in public. Let him pay for his advertising.

A hint to the wise is sufficient, the GAZETTE is at your service.
